JOURNAL POLICY

Light Bearers Bar Journal (LBBJ) aims at publishing peer-reviewed papers dealing with issues of substantive and procedural laws which are of relevance to legal practitioners, judicial officers, and law students, to say the least. It provides a forum for jurists, scholars and practitioners to report research findings emergent from their experience of the correlation between theory and practice in view of settlement of disputes and right ordering of the society. Well researched and original papers on topical subject matters, which also contribute to learning and life in human society, are therefore always welcome. LBBJ appears once in the month of August. The Journal is published online and in print, and abstracted and indexed. Articles in it appear promptly in Google scholar. Manuscripts for consideration can be made all through the year.
